Bryant Park's bard has New York accent

Performance art.

The iconic outdoor show will park itself in an unusual open space this summer.

Drew Valins, 39, an actor dressed in crisp white kitchen gear and red bandana, is used to his voice bouncing off the buildings surrounding a grimy parking lot on the Lower East Side. But on a recent warm Wednesday afternoon, he was playing a Shakespeare character, Speed, at one end of Bryant Park. Curious tourists and workers on their lunch breaks gathered to watch and obliviously barge through the middle of the scene.

Checkered tablecloths that suggest Mulberry Street far more than Verona make a pretty strong statement about this theater company's message. The Drilling Company has been responsible for Shakespeare in the Parking Lot for nearly two decades. Though it looked as though they were going to be forced out of the parking lot last year, the com-

The Drilling Company's summer schedule

In Bryant Park:

- May 15-31: "Two Gentlemen of Verona"
- July 17 to Aug. 2: "Romeo and Juliet"
- Sept. 4-20: "The Taming of the Shrew"

In the new parking lot on Norfolk Street:

- July 9-26: "As You Like It"
- July 30 to Aug. 15: "Macbeth"

pany is back to take over Bryant Park and then their new parking lot digs this summer.

"That parking lot was an amazing thing," Valins said about the original parking lot on Ludlow Street, "It's unique and it was a great way to train and to learn how to handle curve balls of any kind. Because in the parking lot anything goes, really. ... It was the true spirit of Shakespeare, it felt like."

Getting Shakespeare onto the streets is at the center of Shakespeare in the Parking Lot's mission: to make those universal Shakespearean themes of love, revenge and humanity accessible to crowds that might not make it to the theater district, or even get tickets to the Central Park production with the lottery ticket system that's notoriously impossible to beat.

The company lost its parking lot space last year after the council decided to start charging them a fee to use it for their performances at night. For over a decade, up until the end of last summer, you could find a motley collection of Lower East Side residents and young New Yorkers from around the city engrossed in Shakespeare like they'd never seen it before. That's something the company's founder and artistic director, Hamilton Clancy, is determined to keep presenting.

"We're doing "Two Gentlemen of Verona," and we're setting it in Little Italy. And a lot of the actors are speaking the Shakespeare with a New York accent on purpose. Everybody should feel like they just popped out of New York," said Clancy.

"Trust me, normally, if you do Shakespeare with a New York accent people think that you're probably wrong. But it brings out the fun, raw side of it that people don't explore very often," he said. Clancy says he founded The Drilling Company to reach broader audiences than what he says is the narrow target audience of traditional theater. Initially, the company worked with another group in the parking lot — but then took over a few years into the collaboration.

"We realized this is who is coming to the parking lot, this incredibly diverse audience — every socioeconomic group, every race you could meet because of Shakespeare's universal appeal and because of the accessibility of the parking lot, it was just tremendous," he said.

Last year, the city started charging the company for its use of the parking lot, Clancy said — something a company that doesn't charge any entrance fees just couldn't afford.

Luckily, the company had already caught the eye of Bryant Park organizers — who have commissioned them this summer for three productions: "The Two Gentlemen of Verona," "Romeo and Juliet" and finally "The Taming of the Shrew."

"We have the potential to be the most accessible Shakespeare in the whole city because you don't have to stand in line to get tickets. ... There's an unlimited number of seats, and you couldn't pick a more accessible park because it's smack dab in the middle of the city," he said.

But it looks like they'll be even busier than that over the next few months. Just after finding out about Bryant Park, Clancy said they managed to track down another parking lot, still on the Lower East Side, and they couldn't resist the opportunity.

"As You Like It" and "Macbeth" will come to life in the parking lot connected to the Clemente Soto Velez Cultural and Education Center (CSV) on Norfolk Street between Delancey and Rivington.

A Wag! walker takes a golden retriever on a stroll. / WAG!

Dog walkers on demand come to NYC

Wag! An app that lets dog owners order a dog walker was launched in New York City.

Not enough time to walk your dog? There's an app for that.

You can get a lot of things on demand in New York City if you have the right apps on your phone — take-out, laundry, groceries, even a date — and since Thursday, you can also find someone to take your dog for a walk.

The creators of an app called "Wag!" have brought their service to New York after launching in San Francisco and Los Angeles.

The app lets you call a dog walker on demand or schedule a regular walker at the same time every day.

During the walk, a GPS attachment tracks the dog's location, and when the dog gets home, owners receive a pee/poop report, a log of the distance their pet has traveled, and a photo along with a note from the walker.

Co-creator of the app, Josh Viner, is a 27-year-old tech entrepreneur whose friends and family kept telling him he shouldn't get a dog because his lifestyle just wouldn't allow him to care for it properly.

"I really wanted to get a dog and I kept getting convinced out of it by my parents, my brother, my friends, who said you just don't have the time to make that commitment, so I got really frustrated and I noticed a lot of other people had a similar problem," he said.

So Viner came up with Wag! as a solution for busy people who might have unpredictable plans or over-scheduled lives.

Viner is working on adopting a dog, but says Wag! has a golden retriever named Oliver who hangs out with him at work.

About Wag!

Wag! launched in L.A. in January and in San Francisco earlier this month. It's been in beta testing in New York City for the last couple of weeks, but is now officially available in Manhattan and Brooklyn.

- The service promises to have a walker at the customer's door within 30 minutes, and charges $20 for a half-hour walk, $30 for an hour, and $5 extra per extra dog.

- Viner says the walkers are screened for experience with dogs, get background checks and go through an in-house training course.

Art Show planned for Governors Island

The deaths of Eric Garner and Michael Brown by police officers last year caused protesters to take to the streets and elected officials to call for a broader discussion on race in America.

This weekend, an art show on Governors Island encourages attendees to create their own artwork in response to the Black Lives Matter movement and express themselves verbally through an open mic.

"Black Lives Matter Art Show is inspired by the Black Lives Matter movement to discuss, expand scope, perspective and inspiration toward an ongoing series of future culture jams and events around this theme and time," according to the organizer, Occupy Art.

About 300 people have RSVPed to the event on Facebook. The art show on June 6 and 7 is part of FIGMENT NYC, a free and participatory public art event on Governors Island through the end of the summer.

US fighter jets escort flight to JFK after threat

Security. An anonymous caller phoned Maryland State Police with a bomb threat.

An Air France flight from Paris was escorted by two U.S. F-15 fighter jets to New York's John F. Kennedy International Airport on Monday after an anonymous threat was made against the flight, the U.S. military said.

Air France Flight 22, traveling from Charles de Gaulle Airport, landed safely in New York, officials said.

The anonymous threat came in a telephone call to a Maryland State Police barracks on Monday morning, and the caller made a bomb threat involving commercial aviation, Maryland State Police said.

Two U.S. Air Force F-15 jets were launched as a precaution to monitor the flight as it approached New York, said Navy Lieutenant Commander Richlyn Ivey, a spokeswoman for U.S. North American Aerospace Defense Command and U.S. Northern Command.

The plane was cleared in New York with no incidents or hazards reported by passengers or crew, said J. Peter Donald, an FBI spokesman.

The New York Post reported 165 passengers and 11 crew members on board the Air France Airbus A-330 though those figures could not be confirmed.

Air France could not be reached for comment.

Rare escort

It was the first time U.S. military aircraft had escorted a private airplane or commercial aircraft since Feb. 13, when two F-15s followed a general aviation aircraft that was out of contact while flying in a restricted area near San Francisco.

- The aircraft eventually reestablished communications and was followed by the jets until it landed at Half Moon Bay.

Spoiled NYC. Designer hacks the subway with simple, useful signs

It's easy to lose our bearings when we exit the subway, right?

We're constantly having to wonder where we're facing; is that north, south, east or west?

Ryan Murphy, a student at the Rhode Island School of Design, has taken action to help us New Yorkers out. He's brilliantly installed a series of semi-permanent signs on staircases coming out of one Upper East Side subway entrance.

According to Murphy, they contain "the direction you are facing and what street you would hit if you kept walking straight."

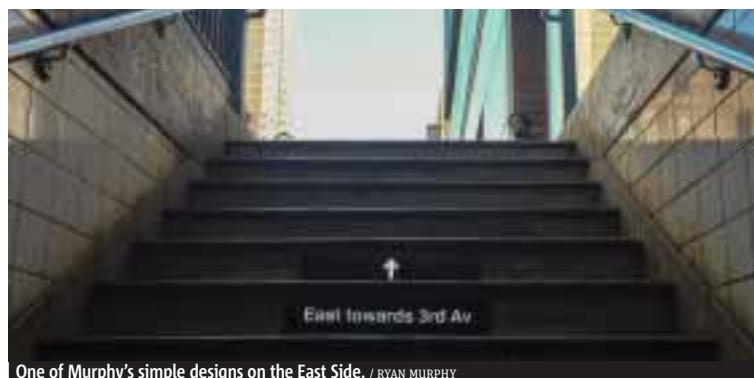

He also says that he doesn't see the MTA taking initiative toward helping people navigate the subway in the near future, but hopes that this is something they keep in mind going forward.

NICOLE TRUST / SPOILED

Keeping it simple

Murphy used black-and-white signs so busy New Yorkers wouldn't miss them. The first illegal installation was discovered at the 86th Street/Lexington Avenue subway station.

STREET FLOODING IN ABILENE, TEXAS

State of emergency declared in Texas, more severe weather expected

The governor of Texas on Monday declared states of disaster in 24 counties, citing the severe weather and flash flooding that have killed at least two people.

The state has been pounded by tornadoes, heavy rainfall, thunderstorms and flooding that forced evacuations and rooftop rescues and left thousands of residents without electrical power.

In declaring the states of disaster in 24 counties, Gov. Greg Abbott said: "The state of Texas has taken brisk action in dispatching all available resources to aid those affected by this severe weather system."

"My thoughts and prayers are with all the communities that are suffering as a result of this weather disaster, and I am grateful for the first responders who have worked tirelessly to provide shelter, care and resources to all impacted areas," he said.

Malaysia finds 139 graves in 'cruel' jungle trafficking camps

Malaysia has found 139 graves, and signs of torture, in more than two dozen squalid human trafficking camps suspected to have been used by gangs smuggling migrants across the border with Thailand, the country's police chief said on Monday.

The dense jungles of southern Thailand and northern Malaysia have been a major stop-off point for smugglers bringing people to Southeast Asia by boat from Myanmar, most of them Rohingya Muslims who say they are fleeing persecution, and Bangladesh.

Time Warner Cable is nearing an agreement to be acquired by smaller peer Charter Communications Inc for about $55 billion, combining the second- and third-largest U.S. cable operators, people familiar with the matter said on Monday.

The cash and stock deal values Time Warner Cable at $195 per share, according to the sources,

Volcano erupts on Galapagos island, imperils pink iguanas

A volcano perched atop one of Ecuador's Galapagos Islands erupted in the early hours of Monday, the National Park said, potentially threatening a unique species of pink iguanas.

The roughly 1.1-mile-high Wolf volcano is located on Isabela Island, home to a rich variety of flora and fauna typical of the archipelago that helped inspire Charles Darwin's theory of evolution following his 1835 visit.

"This is the only population of pink iguanas in the world," The Galapagos National Park said on Twitter.

Authorities detonate suspicious device near Capitol

U.S. authorities on Sunday blew up a pressure cooker found in a vehicle parked near the U.S. Capitol and later arrested the vehicle's owner.

U.S. Capitol police officers on routine patrol found the suspicious vehicle on 3rd Street across from the Capitol's west lawn, spokeswoman Lt. Kimberly Schneider said. They found the pressure cooker and also detected the odor of gasoline. REUTERS

The Foreman forecast

TOM FOREMAN

TOM FOREMAN PREDICTS THIS WEEK IN POLITICS. HE IS A CNN CORRESPONDENT AND AUTHOR OF THE UPCOMING BOOK "MY YEAR OF RUNNING DANGEROUSLY: A DAD, A DAUGHTER, AND A RIDICULOUS PLAN."

THE POLS TAKE A HOLIDAY

Nothing will get done in the Capitol this week because Congress will be enjoying a nice long holiday break. Mind you, nothing would get done if they were at work either, but that's a different matter. As I predicted here last week, our esteemed lawmakers let the Patriot Act debate burn down to the wire despite knowing the deadline was coming for months. So here are three things to look for this week in politics.

1. Badminton with Hillary:

Whether candidate Clinton likes it or not, she'd better get ready to handle some wicked volleys from her critics. Even the long weekend won't quiet the fury over the release of her emails from the State Department. Yes, those emails: the ones she used for public business, but kept on a private server in her home. Three hundred came out late last week. Roughly 30,000 more are still pending—enough to keep Republicans clucking about her secret ways for months.

2. Whirlwind tour:

What's the single most important thing a lame duck president can do for his party? If you answered "Secure his legacy" um ... no. "Raise money?" Now you're thinking like a politician! President Obama will make a Miami swing to rustle up some bucks down in alligator alley. He'll also whip by the National Hurricane Center to check out this year's summer storm forecast. Apparently Dylan was wrong. You do need a weatherman to know which way the wind blows.

3. Republican rodeo:

And GOPers will be out beating the bushes for money, headlines and support too. Among others, watch for Sen. Rand Paul in Chicago complaining about liberal policies, and former New York Gov. George Pataki declaring his candidacy for the presidential nomination because he's always wanted to — and after all, everyone else is doing it.

Obama heralds first Memorial Day without ground war in 14 years

President Barack Obama heralded the first Memorial Day in 14 years without a major ground war in an annual ceremony of remembrance on Monday for fallen American forces.

In remarks at Arlington National Cemetery near Washington, Obama paid tribute to U.S. military personnel who served in conflicts such as World War II as well as the more recent wars in Iraq and Afghanistan, which he wound down as commander in chief.

"For many of us, this Memorial Day is especially meaningful. It is the first since our war in Afghanistan came to an end," Obama said. "Today is the first Memorial Day in 14 years that the United States is not engaged in a major ground war."

As a Democratic presidential candidate in 2008,

Obama sharply criticized the war in Iraq launched by his Republican predecessor, former President George W. Bush.

U.S. forces are now involved in air campaigns against Islamic State militants in Iraq and Syria as well as training missions in Iraq and Afghanistan. The president has been reluctant to relaunch ground operations in Iraq. REUTERS

Emma Stone and Andrew Garfield spotted together

Rumors has it the break Emma Watson and Andrew Garfield had been taking from their relationship is all done, since they've been spotted enjoying some meals together in L.A., and now this: Paparazzi caught the pair out grocery shopping, and I think we all know what that signifies. I mean, I know a Ralph's supermarket in Malibu isn't the most romantic venue, but they were holding hands, man. It was the first time they'd been photographed together since January. "It was always a 'break' due to schedules," a source assures E! News. "They care for each other and always have the best time when together." Even at the grocery store, apparently.

Stamos bummed about the Olsen twins news

So those reports last week that Mary-Kate and Ashley Olsen had come around on the upcoming Netflix "Full House" reboot? Yeah, not so much. And if you think you're broken up about it, check out John Stamos. First he simply tweeted the hashtag "heartbroken" before heading to Facebook.

"Just so you reporters know, this is not a money gig for any of us. Quite the opposite," he wrote. "Sad that a few don't share the rest of the cast's opinion."

You don't got it, dude.

Guys, seriously, cut it out.

Stop asking Katy Perry about her ex-husband, OK?

Sheesh. You marry one famous comedian who then divorces you 14 months later, and reporters will never let you hear the end of it. Katy Perry is still getting questions about Russell Brand more than three years after their split, and you know what? She's had enough. "He hasn't spoken to me since he was filing for divorce," she tells the Daily Telegraph. "I don't want to talk about him. My songs will say what I need to say." So quit it, all right?

*Our digital-analog hybrid has two sides... tough and tougher.
Get it now for an unbelievable $59!*

Your watch shouldn't cost more than your car. It should look and feel like a power tool and not a piece of bling. Wearing it shouldn't make you think twice about swinging a hammer or changing a tire. A real man's timepiece needs to be ready for anything. But that's just my opinion. If you agree, maybe you're ready for the Stauer Centurion Hybrid. Use your Exclusive Insider Promotional Code below and I'll send it to you today for ONLY $59.

This watch doesn't do dainty. And neither do I. Call me old-fashioned, but I want my boots to be leather, my tires to be deep-tread monsters, and my steak thick and rare. Inspiration for a man's watch should come from things like fast cars, firefighters and power tools. And if you want to talk beauty, then let's discuss a 428 cubic inch V8.

Did I mention the $59 price tag? This is a LOT of machine for not a lot of money. The Stauer Centurion Hybrid sports a heavy-duty alloy body, chromed and detailed with a rotating bezel that allows you to track direction. The luminous hour and minute hands mean you can keep working into the night. And the dual digital displays give this watch a hybrid ability. The LCD windows displays the time, day and date, includes a stopwatch function, and features a bright green electro-luminescent backlight. We previously offered the Centurion for $199, but with the exclusive promotional code it's yours for ONLY $59!

No matter what, this watch can keep up. Thanks to the Stauer 30-day Money Back Guarantee, you've got time to prove it. If you're not totally satisfied, return it for a full refund of the purchase price. You also get a 2-year replacement guarantee on both movements. But I have a feeling the only problem you'll have is deciding whether to keep the Stauer Centurion on your dresser or tucked inside your toolbox.

So, are Tyrion and Daenerys ready to take over the world now? / MACALL B. POLAY, HBO

DAENERYS AND TYRION MEET AT LAST

'Thrones' on the Web

WINTER IS COMING

As the editor-in-chief for Winter Is Coming, Dan Selcke spends his time writing about the latest "Game of Thrones" news and preparing for the long night that will have no end.

Read more at Winteriscoming.net.

Episode MVPs

One criticism leveled at this season of "Game of Thrones" is that it's been too slow. And indeed, the show has moved at a more deliberate pace than last year. "The Gift," however, propelled several plotlines forward, starting with the one surrounding Cersei Lannister.

All season long, Cersei has been manipulating fanatic religious group the Sparrows into doing her dirty work. As an organization that exists to punish the wicked, it was inevitable that they would eventually turn on Cersei, who's done plenty of horrible things. She steps into a trap of her own making this week, and it was satisfying to finally see her many misdeeds catch up with her.

Meanwhile, across the Narrow Sea, Tyrion Lannister and Daenerys Targaryen met for the first time. This is a watershed moment for the series, and one that puts it ahead of the books. With the possible exception of Jon Snow, Tyrion and Daenerys are the two most important characters in the story, and the prospect of an alliance between them opens up all kinds of possibilities.

Our watch for next week begins

Up in the North, things were in a bit of a holding pattern, with Stannis marching on Winterfell and Sansa exploring ways to escape her frightening new marriage to Ramsay Bolton. These plotlines are on a collision course, but it may take another episode or two to get there.

With the finale almost in sight, it's time to start looking back and evaluating how Season 5 will fit into the overall show. Pacing complaints aside, the producers have done a great job maneuvering the pieces into place so the final chunk of episodes hits with maximum force. The next few weeks should be quite a ride.

Prepare your finest act: 'AGT' is back

Interview. "America's Got Talent" judge Heidi Klum is ready for a new season of the talent show.

The TV world sometimes seems to have 10 reality competitions for every specialty, whether it's cooking, singing or designing clothing. But "America's Got Talent" is the rare show that is looking for almost any kind of talent. Contestants can audition with whatever they're good at, whether it's singing or something more unusual, like magic tricks. The show returns tonight with a new season of talented hopefuls, with judges Heidi Klum, Howard Stern, Mel B and Howie Mandel weighing in on their skills, with some help from host Nick Cannon. We got the skinny from Klum on tips for people auditioning, and what talent she'd showcase if she were auditioning.

Do you find you prefer certain types of acts over others?

I love being surprised! Any one who comes onstage and can really shock me with a new and interesting talent that I've never seen before always gets my vote. I do also love the kids that come on our stage. They put their little hearts and souls into their performances, and I'm always wowed by what they are capable of.

What advice do you have for people considering an audition?

Always be true to yourself. Do what makes you happy. Don't come audition with some talent that you think will get the most laughs or claps. Do what you love and stick to

Catch Klum on the premiere of "America's Got Talent" tonight at 8 p.m. on NBC. / ISABELLA VOSMIKOVA, NBC

Auditions

Secret skills

If you were going to audition for the show, what skill would you show off?

People always ask me to yodel. I don't think I would necessarily audition as a yodeler, but we did have a yodeling granny this season, and I gave her a run for her money!

it. Master that. The audience loves to see people who love what they're doing. Maybe also ask a really honest, close friend for feedback before you come on.

Do you find yourself getting caught up in the stories of the performers?

You definitely listen to some of the stories and feel for what the contestants have been through, but ultimately, it's a talent competition. They have to show us what they can do and why they deserve to be a million-dollar act in Vegas.

As a judge, what kind of feedback do you think is important to pass on to people?

A lot of people come onstage and forget to connect with the audience. Performing is all about forming that connection. The viewers at home are voting. You want to show them your special sauce.

What performance has most surprised you?

We had a guy on the show who called himself The Regurgitator. I don't want to spoil too much, but I think the name really speaks for itself. I was amazed. There are almost no words to describe it because I have never seen anything like it before, and neither have you!

Amazing life advice from five commencement speakers

The words of wisdom from these recent commencement speeches are helpful for everyone, not just new graduates.

It's a scary time for graduates to charge into the real world. There's the economy, global warming and racial violence. That's when a great commencement speech can really help. The best ones so far this year haven't avoided the issues of the day but addressed them head-on,

There will always be cynics and critics on the sidelines tearing people down, and just as harmful are those people with good intentions who make no contribution at all. THE COOPER UNION

Summer is here and it's the perfect time to learn a new skill or to brush up on an old one!

The Continuing Education Department at The Cooper Union offers a variety of courses and certificate programs that will start in June.

We currently offer two certificate programs in 3-D Fabrication and Typeface Design. Our Green Building Design certificate program will resume in the Fall semester.

Our 3-D Fabrication Certificate comprises an introduction as well as advanced courses in 3-D digital modeling, spatial modeling, physical computation and interaction, as well as digital fabrication. Learn laser cutting, plasma cutting and CNC milling. Artists, engineers and designers will benefit from learning how to use Arduino, an inexpensive microcontroller. Arduino's relatively easy-to-use software enables you to imagine interactive objects and environments that you can actually create.

Students in the Typeface Design certificate program learn specialized skills to design professional quality digital typefaces and lettering. A variety of typeface design workshops will be offered throughout the summer. For more information, please visit coopertype.org

Are you interested in learning to paint or draw? Classes such as Experimental Drawing or Drawing and Painting on location will be great options for students at all levels.

Maybe you would like to improve your photography skills or have an idea for a specific project. Digital Photography will cover camera operation and traditional photographic principles. Developing a Personal Project will help you create a series of photographs based on your interests and will cover editing and sequencing images.

Want to learn more about collage? Fabric Works: Contemporary Collage is a great introduction. Students will explore various methods in image and object making.

Our classes meet at our campus in the East Village, near the N, R and #6 subways. For more information, please visit <http://cooper.edu/ce> or call 212.353.4195

Send your kid to a camp with science

STEM subjects are finding a place among traditional summer activities like making s'mores and capture the flag.

MEGHAN POOLE
@metronewyork
letters@metro.us

Believe it or not, summer camps aren't just about campfire sing-alongs, capture the flag and screen printing T-shirts. In fact, this summer, you may want to consider sending your kids to a camp that incorporates STEM.

STEM, an acronym that stands for "science, technology, engineering and math," has become increasingly buzzy. Still, not every child is going to clamor at the chance to code or stare into a microscope all day long. More and more general day camps are including STEM-based activities. These allow kids to learn while still leaving room for crafts and sports.

Alan Saltz, the director of 92Y's camp program, believes in the importance of incorporating STEM into everyday life. "Science isn't just a subject that you can put into a box and take it out to teach kids," he says. "It's really got to become a part of their daily lives, and camps can help do that." Saltz elaborated on some of the benefits to STEM-infused camps.

They make learning fun

While some children may be put off by continuing their education during the summer, the best camps know how to sneak science and math into kids' favorite activities — whether that's discovering the chemistry involved in ceramics or figuring out the mechanics of a soccer-ball kick. "If you make it fun, they're not going to differentiate what they like and what they don't like," he says.

They offer a balance

Awesome as robots are, robotics camps aren't for everyone. But throw in some robots interspersed with your cooking classes and rafting, and kids are going to be much more excited about them. "We're getting more mainstream camps to incorporate all this into what they're doing, so not everyone has to go to specialty camps [to learn science]," says Saltz.

The City College of New York

The Grove School's Computer Science Department has taken major steps designed to serve the IT needs of the business community in NYC and beyond. It has developed a Master's in Information Systems (MIS) primarily intended for working professionals with backgrounds in engineering or science who wish to develop their careers in information management.

Management of computer and information systems in the modern workplace is vital. Technology must work effectively and reliably from both the operational and strategic perspectives. The MIS program emphasizes practical lessons that enhance the ability to analyze computer and information needs as well as develop immediate and long-range business plans.

The program's state of the art coursework in business-critical areas teaches concepts of business software and systems management, economics and finance, and quantitative management skills. In an age where large numbers of information-related jobs go abroad, this degree provides professionals with the edge they need to remain competitive in today's global marketplace and take responsibility for the next generation of business information technology.

Students will graduate with expertise in managing information systems, specialized technical knowledge, strong management and communication skills and an understanding of business practices and principles. The 30-credit program is offered in the evening and culminates in an intensive independent project in the final semester. Initial areas of specialization for this project include Medical Informatics, Business Process Engineering and Financial Computing—all work-relevant experience. The MIS program strongly emphasizes collaboration and teambuilding that promote career-long professional relationships that will continue to serve participants once they graduate.

How to land a job at Google

Over 2 million résumés cross Bock's desk each year from people hoping to work at Google. Some do pretty crazy things to stand out. "I got a robot in the mail the other day," he tells us. It turns out, you don't have to go to extreme lengths to get his attention. Here's what he looks for when going through résumés:

1 Spellcheck. "It sounds basic, but make sure you don't have any mistakes on your résumé. It's too easy of a way for a recruiter to reject you."

2 Be specific. "Describe what you accomplished, why and how it was measured. Instead of just saying you were employee of the month, say 'I was awarded employee of the month as a result of high customer satisfaction,' or 'I ranked 10th out of the 50 top associates in the first six months of the year.'"

3 Play up your experience. "Several years ago, [recruiters] focused on where you went to school and your grades, but we stopped caring about that stuff because none of that has actually proven how you're going to perform." Instead, use your résumé to show what you've done related to the job you're applying for.

How to be happy at a job you hate

Laszlo Bock, the head of people operations at Google and the author of "Work Rules!" gives four tips on how to make the most of your job.

EMILY LAURENCE
@EmLaurence
emily.laurence@metro.us

Having your dream job is a luxury most people don't have, but that doesn't mean you have to spend your eight-hour shift miserable, counting down until happy hour. If anyone knows a thing or two about making work fun, it's Laszlo Bock, the head of people operations at Google. Here are a few of his tips:

Assume the best in people

If you think your boss is a jerk or one of your co-workers has a bad attitude, Bock says it helps to remember that everyone has stuff going on in their personal lives, and he or she could be projecting that at work.

Boss driving you nuts? At least pretend to like him, and it will subconsciously help. ISTOCK

"If someone comes into a meeting looking angry and drops their bag, we tend to think, 'Well, that person is a real jerk.' We don't assume maybe their dog is sick, or he or she has all these stressful things going on," Bock says. It's certainly better than the alternative, assuming everyone is a terrible human being. "Assuming the best in people is a much nicer way to live," Bock says.

Focus on the few things you do like

Bock suggests "job crafting," making a list of everything you do at work and shifting your time to focus on the things you most enjoy. "Even if [realistically] you aren't able to change your job, the simple act of making that list makes you more aware of the things you enjoy, and that will make you happier and more productive," he says.

Express gratitude

It turns out, acting happy at work even when you aren't, and being nice to your co-workers even if they secretly annoy you, can make you actually feel happier. Bock says even devoting just a few minutes a day to outwardly expressing gratitude will really lift your mood.

"It can be as simple as writing thank-you emails or sitting and reflecting on things you enjoy and things you feel happy about," he says. "Just focusing on the few [parts] of the day you're grateful for or thanking other people has a positive effect."

Realize no one loves their job all the time

Bock says even he has days when his job is not fun. "There's no job that will make you deliriously happy all the time. That's why people get paid to work," he says. "Especially when you are early in your career, it's important to remember that. And it gets better."

Three Hawaiian habits to beat city stress

Adopt an island mindset to feel like you're on permanent vacation.

EMILY LAURENCE
@EmLaurence
emily.laurence@metro.us

I can't remember if I was anxiety-prone before I moved to New York City or if moving here made me more anxious. But in an overcrowded city where everyone is overcaffeinated and overworked, feeling a bit on edge has become my new normal.

Sensing that I needed a vacation, a friend — and one of those rare New Yorkers who doesn't wear all black and never seems to be in a rush — suggested I take off work for a week (gasp!) and go to Oahu for Wanderlust, a yoga and meditation festival. So I went, turning off my phone for the first time in years.

One of the biggest things I picked up on from everyone I met, from my gracious hosts to my surf instructors and even my taxi drivers and hotel bellhops, was that no one seemed even a smidge stressed-out. In fact, they all seemed happy. So besides bringing home delicious macadamia nuts and Kona coffee, I brought back habits gleaned from the Hawaiian people that have truly reduced my anxiety.

Be conscious of what you put into your body

It would be a crime to cut out pizza, bagels and doughnuts forever, but studies have shown that a sugary and carb-heavy diet can lead to anxiety, causing spikes in mood swings and crashes. Nutrition and mental health are more directly related than we ever thought.

In Hawaii, fresh fruit and fish were part of virtually every one of my meals, from chef Chai Chaowasaree's ahi with tomato-mango salsa to Nobu Waikiki's black cod miso. But I never felt overstuffed or gross the next day, like after binge-eating other foods. Now that I'm home, I'm craving chef Chai's simple dessert of fresh pineapple slices even more than sugary cupcakes. (Try your hand at cooking Hawaiian-style with chef Chai's miso seabass recipe at Metro.us.)

Find your peace

I took a hula dancing class with master hula teacher Liko Cooke, and she said something that stuck with me: "Hawaiians believe salt-water is healing. Whenever I come back from a vacation, I immediately go for a swim in the ocean. Here, if someone is sick, they drink warm saltwater. We even use sea salt to bless our food." Translate this principle to a place that heals your spirit, whether it's a secret spot in the park, your favorite local cafe or somewhere else entirely, and go there regularly. You don't need white sand beaches and frothy waves to find your peace.

Get your adrenaline going

My favorite part of the trip was taking surf lessons, first at Hilton Hawaiian Village and then at my hotel, the Waikiki Parc. The adrenaline rush of catching a wave followed by the complete peace of paddling in the water was therapeutic. But there are other ways you can get the same feeling closer to home. Try an extreme workout like trapeze. Take that improv class. Whatever will give you a natural high and a sense of accomplishment, do it.

Appreciate your surroundings

Hawaiians are really in tune with their environment. At Wanderlust, yoga poses were often described in ways that reflected the immediate surroundings. The teachers spouted instructions like, "Stand like you are straddling a whale," and, "Turn your chest out like a dolphin." New York City may have less nature than Hawaii, but we live in a beautiful city that we're often passing through in a blur. Just taking the time to stop rushing and look up once in a while — who cares if you look like a tourist? — can take you out of the bustle of the street for a moment of calm. Use it as a chance to remind yourself that you are exactly where you're supposed to be. Who needs tree pose when you can do skyscraper pose?

Letters to the editor

A memorable tableau

This one is for the five grown men and women I saw sitting on the sidewalk this morning. You had red cups in hand, drunk at 7 in the morning, cheerfully and loudly proclaiming that you had the day off for Memorial Day. This one is especially for the short-haired, curly blonde woman I saw drunkenly preaching to the high school students walking by that they should spend the weekend appreciating the people who have been in our armed services and died for our country, while your friends laughed at you and you laughed at yourself. I hope you're reading this, because did you happen to know that while you were laughing over your booze, you were sitting right across the street from a residential veterans program, where men and women are trying to fight alcoholism and addiction? Did you realize you were sitting across the street from a military veterans cemetery? Did you realize that the woman passing in front of you will spend this weekend mourning the loss of her first high school boyfriend, a Marine, and her deceased Navy grandfather? This one is for all five of you, because clearly you have no true idea of the meaning of the Memorial Day holiday.

Weekend's answer

It's do-or-die time again for Rangers

NHL. The resilient Rangers are 3-0 so far this postseason in "win or go home" games.

It is not unfamiliar territory for these Rangers.

Tuesday, it'll be one match to determine whether their season comes to an end or if they can force team sports' ultimate game.

"It's not like we haven't been there before," Henrik Lundqvist told reporters after the Rangers were shutout, 2-0, by the Tampa Bay Lightning in Game 5 of the Eastern Conference Final. Tampa Bay leads the best-of-seven, 3-2. Game 6 is set for Tuesday (8 p.m., NBCSN) at Amalie Arena in Tampa Bay. "We just have to go out there and leave everything out there and see how far that takes us. It's going to be a challenge for us."

Indeed. It has become plainly evident that the Lightning are unlike any playoff opponent the Rangers have competed against in the Alain Vigneault era. Following Games 2 and 3, Tampa Bay's Triplets line had dominated the conversation. Following Game 5, the talk shifted to franchise cornerstone Steven Stamkos and goaltender Ben Bishop.

Stamkos finished the game with a goal and an assist, both occurring in a second period in which Tampa took control of the Extreme measures

Both Rangers goaltender Henrik Lundqvist and Lightning netminder Ben Bishop have seen extremes this series.

- In Games 1, 4 and 5, Lundqvist allowed two goals or less. He allowed six goals in both in Games 2 and 3.
- In Games 1, 2 and 5, Bishop allowed two goals or less. In Games 3 and 4, he allowed five goals in each.
- Lundqvist does not have a shutout this postseason. Bishop has two, including Sunday night's 2-0 Game 5 win at Madison Square Garden.

game. Despite a slight 6-4 advantage in shots on goal in the first, the Rangers were able to implement their forecheck and cycle game, and, as a result generated two power plays.

However, the Lightning essentially beat the Rangers at their own game in the last two periods. Tampa clogged the neutral zone and would not allow the Rangers to carry the puck into the offensive zone. And the Lightning's penalty kill units were significantly more aggressive in Game 5 than they had been in Games 2-4, as the Rangers went 0-for-4 with just four shots on the man advantage.

"Well, [the Lightning] did find those shooting lanes," Vigneault said. "I really like the way we came out, the energy, and the time we spent in their end. But for all that time, we didn't get much out of it. They did a great job of defending, blocking lanes and blocking shots, and it made it really challenging for us."

"Our power play had been getting us some momentum, had been getting us some really good looks. Our execution was a little bit slow tonight on the power play. Because it was slow, it made it easier for them to defend. We didn't get very many looks on it, and obviously that was a big part of [Sunday's] game."

As for Bishop, Tampa's goaltender stopped all 26 shots he faced in Game 5 after yielding 10 goals in Games 3 and 4.

"I would say he looked really confident in the net," Lightning coach Jon Cooper said. "We've watched this in two previous series. As the series have gone on, and the longer they've gone on, he's elevated his game. It's when you know he's back there and he's playing with that confidence, and the way he's playing the puck, he's making that first save. He's not giving up rebounds. He's just commanding the net."

"We feed off that. We have no doubt how he can play. With four teams that are left, you're not getting here without good goaltending. All great goalies left, and Bish is a top-tier goaltender in this league, and he's shown it."

PORN FILMS AND

Sunny, aka Tammy Lynn Sytch, aka the woman who put thousands of current 27-to-35-year-old American males through puberty is in discussions to do porn. She was recently approached by Vivid Entertainment, which is offering a six-figure contract, to appear in multiple adult films, according to TMZ.

The anti-Miss Elizabeth, Sunny skipped the whole "classy" thing and went right to the raunch during her wrestling run, becoming the first valet/manager/on-air talent to truly flash some skin on WWE (then-WWF) TV. From that, she owns one of the more hilarious titles in the history of Earth: "AOL's Most Downloaded Woman of 1996."

"After the tremendous success of [former WWF Diva turned adult film star] Chyna, this makes total sense," Vivid boss Steve Hirsch told TMZ. "Hoping we can work it out."

The report said that the deal is "VERY close" and that Sytch would start filming immediately, but Sytch responded on her Twitter account @WWEHOFerSunny that the deal is not yet done.

"To clear the air, I am NOT doing a porn. ... I have been approached by Vivid Entertainment, but nothing has been negotiated or put on paper," Sytch wrote late last week. Over the holiday weekend, it was said that Sytch was 60/40 in favor of the career change.

Playing the Field

It should be noted that Sytch is not nearly as striking as she used to be (who is?). But, from a straight nostalgic prospective, this would be right up there with seeing Hulk Hogan drop the leg on The Rock.

Deflate, then fight

A "Free Tom Brady" rally took place at the Gillette Stadium parking lot on Sunday. Sure, it was mostly a convenient excuse to hold a football style tailgate in May and sure, there was ZERO chance that Roger Goodell was going to say, "Meh, let's call the whole thing off" after people with Pat Patriot picket signs walked around in circles on the Sunday of a holiday weekend, a solid 210 miles away from the league offices. But the folks that did hang out by an empty football stadium on one of the least heavy news cycle days of the calendar year did get one point across: This thing ain't dyin'.

Robert Kraft can give up. Tom Brady himself might even eventually settle for a one-game suspension. But Patriots fans are firmly at war with the other 31 fan bases. For every "Matt Walsh" and "Jim McNally in the bathroom" reference on an ESPN.com comment section, there is a Patriots fan ready to offer up a 2,576-word response on why video taping opposing team's signals was actually legal at the time (it's where the camera is placed, dummy) and how three of the four Colts balls checked at halftime of the AFC Championship Game were actually underinflated, too.

The "rhetoric" that Kraft talked about in his white flag press conference last week certainly isn't going away. There are thousands upon thousands of Colts, Jets, Steelers, Giants, Eagles, Panthers and Rams fans more than willing to keep the "conversation" with Pats fans going.

MLB

MLB. Harvey, Wright with lingering injuries

Two of the Mets' biggest stars are dealing with injury issues as manager Terry Collins said ace pitcher Matt Harvey may have a "dead arm" and third baseman David Wright is set to see a California back specialist.

Harvey had one of the worst outings of his career against Pittsburgh this past Saturday. The Mets do not believe the "dead arm" issue to be serious as Collins said it "happens sometimes" with pitchers.

Wright hasn't played since pulling his hamstring on April 14. During his rehab, a back issue arose and he is still working his way back.
